The documents related to the adherence of the teaching hospital to quality of care and patient safety practices.

- Upon enrollment in the medical programme at the Institution, it is strongly recommended that both undergraduate and postgraduate students receive Hepatitis B Vaccination and Measles vaccine as a preventive measure as soon as possible.
- It is recommended that newly hired teaching and non-teaching staff receive the Hepatitis B Vaccination as a preventive measure.
- The Department of Microbiology consistently provides safety training to interns, undergraduate and postgraduate students, as well as nursing students, through theoretical lectures and practical hands-on training sessions.
- The importance of hand washing technique and steps is emphasized for individuals involved in patient care. In our hospital, various tools such as charts, display materials, and other forms of communication are employed to promote awareness and facilitate the implementation of infection prevention and control practices.
- The infection ward serves to separate patients who are infected from those who are not infected.
- The CSSD unit in our hospital demonstrates efficient operations and a strong commitment to implementing infection control strategies.
- Regular collection of swabs from operation theatres and various intensive care units, as well as the implementation of fumigation practices in collaboration with the department of Microbiology, are carried out consistently. These measures are specifically focused on infection prevention and control practices in order to effectively manage and mitigate the spread of infections.
- The institution adheres rigorously to infection prevention and control guidelines, ensuring strict compliance with standard operating procedures.
- The Hospital Infection Control Committee conducts regular assessments of infection control policies.
